

Boulder's Regenerative Ecosystem

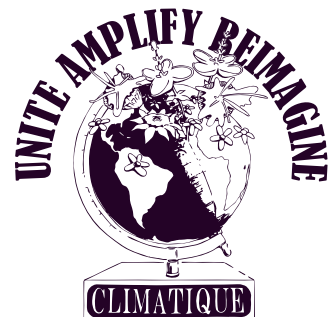

We've created this map to demonstrate and celebrate the rich tapestry of projects and groups working towards regenerative change in our community.

This is only a taste — some of the most visible and approachable 'nodes' in our ecosystem. Use this to start exploring, but know that there's much more to discover.

Read more below

Read about our mapping process and philosophy and explore the full list of nodes with additional links and details.

About the Map

How to use this map, and the index:

Take your time exploring the mycelium! Scan the QR code to see the digital version of the map, with links to each organization. You can also use a search engine — Ecosia is our favorite. It will also help to add “Boulder” in most cases.

In the index, italics are used for an group’s full name, bold for a category, and a dagger † for an event. Some nodes are listed more than once in the index to show multiple associations.

How, and why, we made this map:

Tis map is the culmination of years of experience with Boulder’s regenerative, revolutionary undercurrent. It was not the product of rigorous research; it arose from conversations between Climatique and the many leaders and knowledge bearers in and around our community. We often wished we had a directory to hand people who were new to the city, or new to thinking about the polycrisis

What resulted is our distillation of the most approachable organizations, events, projects and locations we know of. Each is working to decompose and transform our world for the better, in the intersecting realms of the inner self, the culture we’re embedded in, and the systems we rely on to feed, house, clothe, organize us. Tis lens comes from a very impressive mapping project by the group 2nd Renaissance, by whom we were inspired.

Therapists, Anonymous Groups, retreats...

We’ve tried to show the deep intersectionality of these nodes, but nonetheless some could easily be placed elsewhere on the map. For the most part, it does not include smaller groups, businesses, nor any nonprofit that doesn’t have easy ways to get involved. It emerged naturally, so like all natural things, it is imperfect and incomplete...

About the “Hubs”

Tese orgs support other groups and projects. Tey often engage in curation (with directories and calendars like Boulder.earth and Cool Boulder), or with their own maps (like the ambitious mapping project from Boulder Climate Justice Hive.) Don’t confuse their depiction as a tree to mean these are “umbrella organizations;” rather, like the roots and trunk of a tree, these organizations nourish and uplift other groups in the ecosystem.

Regen. Ecosystem Index

Wellness

- Mindfulness & Spirituality
- Naropa University
 - Boulder Eco-Dharma
 - Boundless in Motion Sangha
 - Green Faith Boulder
 - Universalist Unitarian Church

- Movement
- Running and Cycling groups
- Weekly cruiser† ride

- Mi Chantli
- Healing Groups
- Women and Men’s Groups
- SPAN Safehouse Progressive Alliance for Nonviolence

Community

- Community Gatherings
- Sister Carmen
 - Climatique
 - Weekly dinners
- Women and Men’s Groups

- Event Spaces
- Trident Cafe
 - Language exchange nights
 - Te Riverside
 - Junkyard Social Club

- Co-working and Co-living
- Boulder Housing Coalition
 - Regen Hub

Learning

- Learning Spaces
- Boulder Public Library
 - Folk Farm School
- Makerspaces
- Tinkermill

- BLDG 61
- Climatique weekly dinners
 - Trident language exchange nights
 - Community-led Emergency Preparedness Training

- Education Programs
- CU Boulder
 - CU Clubs
 - CNAIS Center for Native American and Indigenous Studies
- INVST Program
- Environmental Center
 - Naropa University

Arts & Culture

- Circular Economy
- Nude Foods
 - Boulder U-Fix-it Clinic
 - Community Cycles
 - Art Parts

- Boulder Eco-Cycle
 - Resource Central
 - CHaRM Center for Hard to Recycle Materials
- Indigenous Culture

- Right Relationship Boulder
 - Ch’il Indigenous Foods
 - HAFN Harvest of All First Nations
 - Corn Festival
 - CNAIS Center for Native American and Indigenous Studies
- Music and Audio
- Motus Teater
 - Roots Music Project
 - Town Hall

- Radio 1190
- Visual Art
- Te Wheel Art Collective
 - Art Parts
 - NoBo Arts District

Environment & Ecology

- Food Systems
- Boulder Food Rescue
 - MASA Seed Foundation
 - DAR Drylands Agroecology Research
 - Elk Run Farm
- Growing Gardens
 - Boulder Farmer’s Market
 - High Plains Permaculture
 - MASA Seed Foundation
 - High Plains Permaculture

- Food Not Bombs Boulder
 - Dharma’s Garden
- Climate Solutions
- PLAY Boulder Foundation
 - Tree Tender Program
- People and Pollinators Action Program
 - 350 Colorado

Social Justice & Policy

- Justice Advocacy
- Boulder Democratic Socialists of America
 - Rocky Mountain Peace and Justice Center
- Immigrant Rights Groups
- CIRC Colorado Immigrant Rights Coalition
 - CCRR Colorado Rapid Response Network

- El Centro Amistad
- Racial Justice Groups
- NAACP Boulder Chapter
 - National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
 - SURJ Showing Up for Racial Justice
- Mutual Aid
- SAFE Boulder Safe Access For Everyone
 - Weekly distributions
 - Food Not Bombs Boulder

- Weekly distributions
 - Boulder Food Rescue
- Climate Justice
- 350 Colorado
 - Climate Justice Collaborative

